THOUGHT CONVENTION WAS VAUDEVILLE.

Seeing the crowded lobby at the Orpheum yesterday afternoon, a stranger wandered into the box office there and inquired the price of tickets. Joe Cohen, supposing the inquirer to be a benefit customer for the night performance, passed out a pasteboard and took the coin, while the stranger wandered to the door, handed his ticket to a delegate standing there and marched to a front seat. After watching what was going on for a few minutes he tumbled and wanted his money back. The show wasn't worth the price.

LOCAL BREVITIES.
